Your support will provide educators across the nation with culturally responsive teaching tools, expert-guided learning experiences, and classroom-ready resources to enhance their practice.

The Pequot Neepun Teacher Institute provides a groundbreaking solution: a one-week immersive workshop where educators explore rarely told histories—taught from Indigenous perspectives.

Many schools lack accurate and inclusive curriculum about Native American histories and cultures.

The Pequot Neepun Teacher Institute reflects the Mashantucket Pequot Tribal Nation's dedication to empowering educators and inspiring future generations to engage with Indigenous history in meaningful and transformative ways.

By funding the institute with sponsorship support, the Mashantucket Pequot Museum and the Mashantucket Pequot Tribal Nation affirms their long-standing commitment to education and cultural preservation.

YOUR SPONSORSHIP SUPPORTS:

- Immersive, expert-guided instruction by Mashantucket Pequot citizens
- Primary sources and hands-on materials aligned with national standards
- Field visits connecting history with contemporary Indigenous life
- Culturally accurate, classroom-ready lessons for educators

By equipping teachers with authentic resources and Indigenous-led insights, this initiative is a critical step toward reversing historic injustices and fostering representation in American classrooms.

Educators will engage with primary and secondary sources housed at the Mashantucket Pequot Museum, interact with Pequot educators, and participate in field experiences throughout Southeastern Connecticut, broadening their understanding of Pequot history and culture.

“We have an opportunity to positively impact American schools with this program. The more access our nation’s teachers have to high-quality resources from the Indigenous perspective, the better they’ll be able to guide their students through content that has historically been very poorly taught, if taught at all. The goal is to cultivate more culturally intelligent, compassionate and informed teachers, as they are the ones inspiring the next generation of American philosopher citizens.”

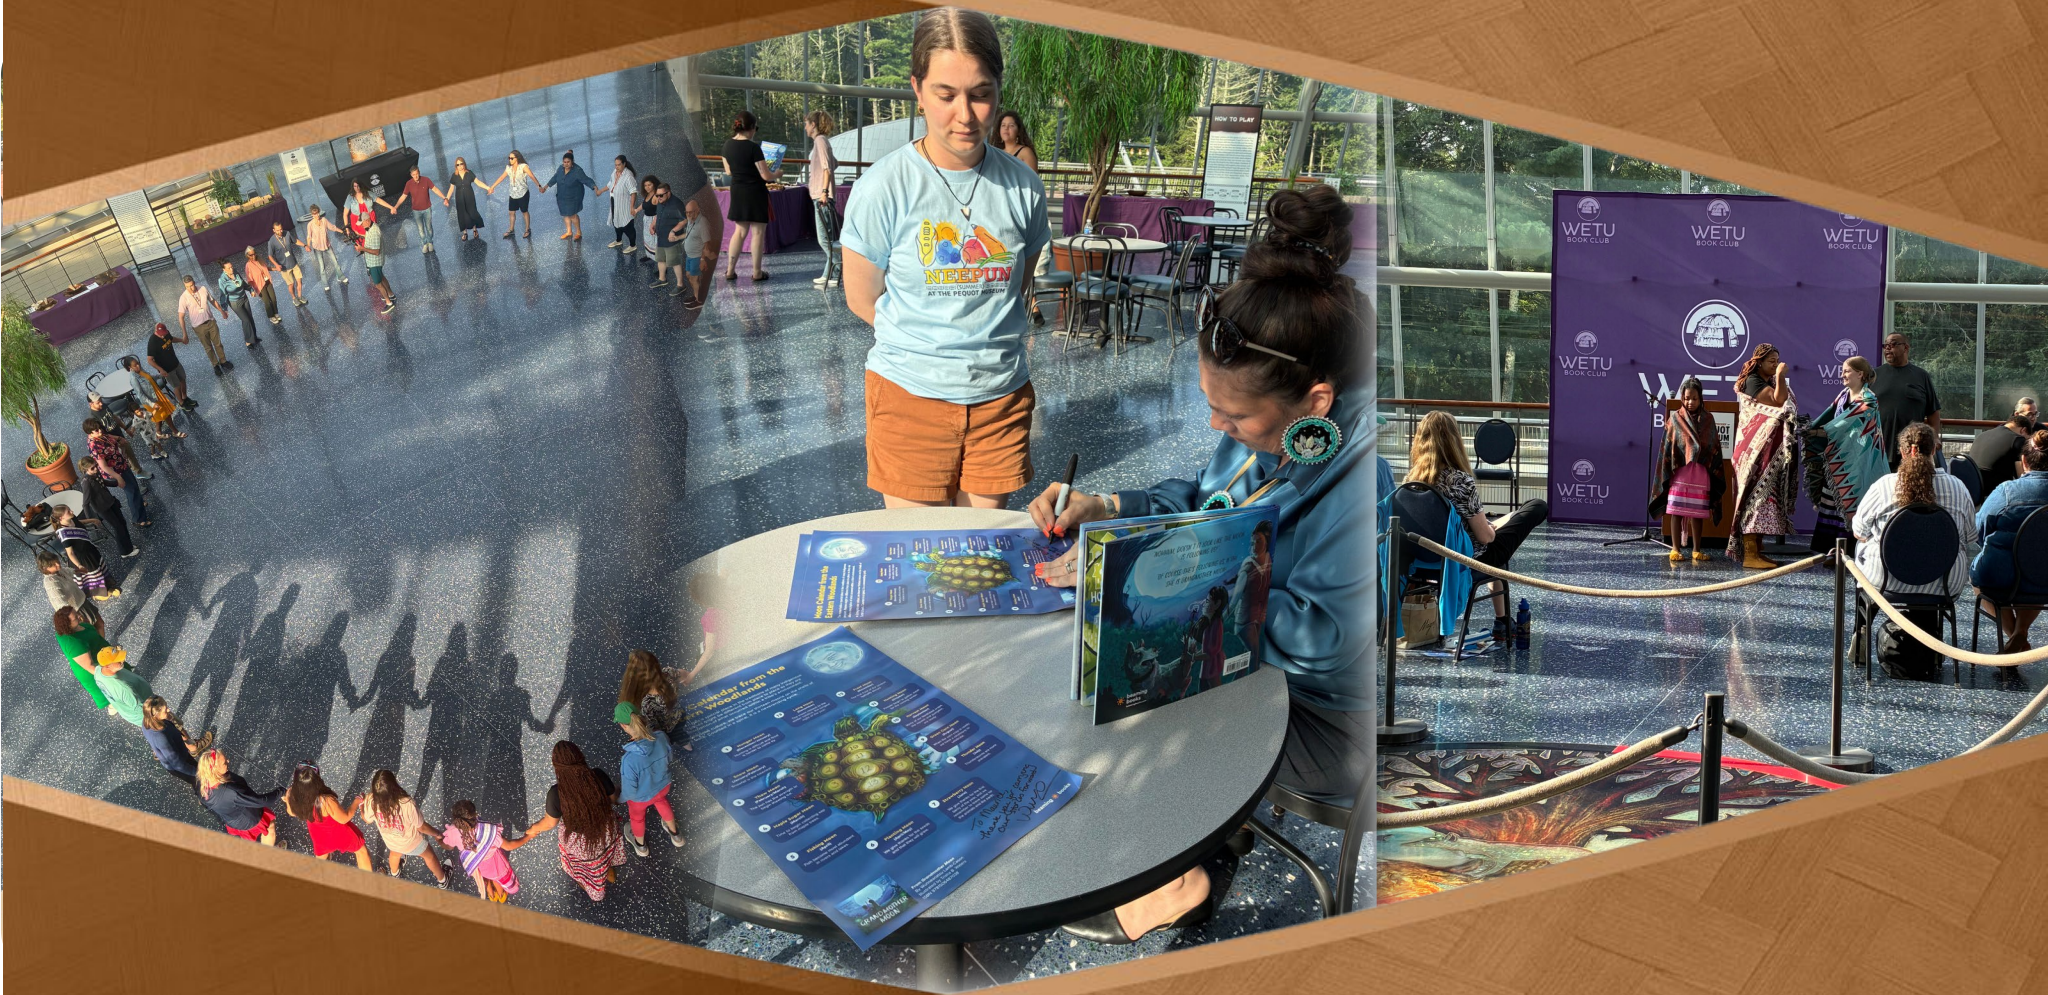

- Rebecca Gomez, MPTN Director of Education

“Ensuring that educators and students have the necessary information about Pequot and northeastern woodland tribal history, traditions, and culture has always been a priority for the Pequot Museum. Knowing the false narratives that have been perpetuated, we are grateful to be able to provide an accurate understanding about who we are and where we come from.”

– Joshua Carter, Pequot Museum Executive Director
